“Research tells us that regular interactions with employers in primary and secondary schools help young people understand the importance of what they are learning, support their achievement and increase outcomes for living happy, healthy and prosperous lives.”

Do you remember what inspired you to do the job you do today? Was it a family member, teacher or someone you read about or saw on TV?

inspiring Dorset

Our research evidence* shows that by six years old, children have already started to form opinions about what they can – or can't – be in the future. They are influenced by what they see around them and gender, ethnicity, and social background can play a big part in this.

CAN YOU HELP CHANGE THIS?

By becoming an 'Inspiring Dorset' volunteer you can get involved in the wide range of events that local schools are going to be organising over the years ahead.

You can help to spark young people's imaginations about what they can achieve in their futures by chatting to students about your career journey.

WHATEVER JOB YOU DO – WE WANT YOU

We need to show young people here in Dorset the range of jobs available, so we want volunteers from all levels – apprentices to CEOs, app designers to marine biologists to volunteer to chat with school children about your career story.

THERE'S SOMETHING IN IT FOR YOU TOO

It's your chance to inspire young people to consider jobs in your sector and to discuss some of the things you are passionate about. From challenging stereotypes and celebrating diversity to the importance of different school subjects or the various routes into work – educational or vocational. It's great fun and our volunteers often tell us that they learn new skills and enjoy networking with other volunteers.
